

A BEAUTIFUL SMILE TRAVELS FAR

Dr. Christian Coachman, dental ceramist, dentist, husband, father, tennis player

Roberta Comachio, teacher, wife, mother, tennis player

Birthplace: São Paulo, Brazil

Like many of the patients who seek out the dentists of Goldstein, Garber & Salama, I traveled across the world to meet this internationally-recognized team. Since I first entered the field of dentistry in São Paulo, I always heard about their practice in Atlanta, comprised of one of the leading authorities in esthetic dentistry, three dual-trained specialists, and several cosmetic dentists with advanced training. This group of dentists listens to their patients, then works collaboratively in one facility to achieve the best possible outcome for them. They have an in-office custom dental laboratory, which is a rarity to find. When I joined the practice as the lead ceramist, I was honored to become part of this highly respected team.

From a family of six generations of dentists, I always knew my future would be in dentistry. While attending dental school and working in my father's dental laboratory, I found myself drawn to visual arts and architectural design. I decided to become a dental ceramist so I could combine my interest in esthetics and my dental background to work with other dentists in creating beautiful smiles.

With patients flying in from around the world for treatment, and a staff fluent in nine different languages, I very much enjoy the dynamic communication. Natural... white... Hollywood... not too perfect... symmetrical... youthful... these are descriptions I often hear when I am helping the doctors design a patient's smile. My goal as a ceramist is to customize each smile to the desires of the patient while maintaining balance and facial harmony. I love working with these doctors in their multi-specialty practice and helping them give patients healthy, attractive and more confident smiles. My wife Roberta and I also entrust the care of our smiles to the doctors at Goldstein, Garber & Salama.
